Blood sampling

It can be carried out in your area

You can visit Diagnovum* to have a blood sample taken without the need for an appointment. A general practitioner, the thrombosis service, an in-house physician, midwife or consultant at your hospital has made a blood sampling request for you.

Sampling clinics

We have a total of some 150 sampling clinics spread throughout our regions (Adrz, Bravis, ETZ and ZorgSaam). There is always a sampling clinic near you. Our friendly and professional staff there remain at your service. As we collaborate with various hospitals, you can rely on us to swiftly forward test results to both your healthcare provider and your patient portal. The addresses and opening hours of the blood sampling clinics can be found on our website, diagnovum.nl.

Blood sampling in your own home is available at the request of your attending physician. If your attending physician has not arranged for home sampling, and you are unable to visit a sampling clinic, you should get in touch with our Customer Contact Centre.

Thrombosis service

Have you received notice from the thrombosis service to have your blood tested? In that case, you can also visit one of Diagnovum's blood sampling clinics without an appointment.

"My GP gave me a referral to have my blood tested. I was able to do so at one of the Diagnovum sampling clinics.

Highly convenient, as it is close to my home. The GP received the results of the test quickly. He was therefore able to inform me promptly."

Home sampling with or without fasting: when will the phlebotomist visit?

If you need to fast for blood sampling, this means that you may not eat or drink anything after midnight. You may nevertheless drink water and/or tea without sugar. In the case of tests that require fasting, the phlebotomist will visit you between 07:30 and 10:00 hours. In the case of tests that do not require fasting, the phlebotomist will visit between 07:30 and 12:00 hours.
